

New Engineer Has Wide Experience

Did you open the door to your classroom only to find a knob loose in your hand? Have you found a window that refuses to open? Your man in the hour of need is Robert W. Bridges, UMD's new senior engineer. He directs the force of engineers and janitors who keep our physical plant in order.

Mr. Bridges has his office in 112 Main. The startled student with doorknob in hand, may think that he has entered the office of a professor by mistake, since the new chief engineer who rises to meet him does not fit the usual conception a student has of the engineer.

But this young man in a business suit will help both teachers and students solve their physical plant problems. He is fully qualified to do so. His schooling in the field was culminated by a bachelors degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Minnesota.

He has had four years of experience on the main campus physical plant staff as an engineering assistant and as a full-time engineer.

An industrial artist with Curtiss-Wright Corp., St. Louis, he also worked for the National Iron Co., here in Duluth, as a draftsman for a year.

Arnold Air Society Has Big Year Planned

The UMD Squadron of the Arnold Air Society, national association of advanced ROTC cadets, held its first meeting of the year last Tuesday evening at the Tweed Hall lounge.

Presided over by Cadet Reynburn Roulston, commanding officer of the organization, the group formulated plans for a year of active participation in ROTC and campus events. It was voted to enter a color guard and marching unit in the Homecoming parade, at which time a new "Sweetheart of the Corps" will make her first appearance of the year. Beverly Evans, who won the honor at last spring's "Sweetheart" contest, is not attending UMD this year.

Plans for attending the Society's third annual national conclave, to be held at the University of Miami, Coral Gables, Florida, next month were also discussed.

"Earnest" Play Cast Ends First Week of Rehearsals

The cast of the University theater production, "The Importance of Being Earnest," has completed their first week of nightly rehearsals for the play, which will be presented Nov. 7-11.

One night's "house" for the four-day run has been purchased by the Duluth Women's club. They opened their campaign, directed by Mrs. R. H. Bonnell, last week, when the University theater group presented "Tea With the Brownings" to the group. The Women's club will have 500 tickets to sell.

The cast for the play is now complete, except for the role of Merriman, the butler. In addition to the roles assigned last week to Herb Taylor, Dennis LaRoque, Helen Bromberg, Jim Pomeroy and Alyce Wellberg, the following were cast: Don

Fun, Frolic to Reign Supreme During Homecoming Week

"UMD's biggest, bestest Homecoming Week ever" will get under way Monday, according to Chairman Ron Weber. That's the day when the various clubs will start promoting their queen candidates in a vigorous election campaign.

On Thursday, a combination Queen convocation-pep assembly is slated for 11:00 a.m. in the auditorium. The queen candidates will be introduced to the student body at this time by the campaign managers. Master of ceremonies for the convocation will be Dick Wallin.

Voting will begin immediately

Baritone Features Shakespearean "Quiz"

Coming to UMD Tuesday, October 23, will be Earle Spicer, well-known singer of English and American ballads. He accompanies himself on the piano and his Shakespeare "quiz" is one of the highlights of his program.

Mr. Spicer, a New York baritone, has sung with many of the leading orchestras and oratorio societies here and in England, for the English nobility, and at the White House, and for three years was feature soloist on one of the leading NBC programs with Donald Vorhees and his orchestra.

His 700 engagements, 300 of them re-engagements at different colleges, are proof of the popularity of Earl Spicer's programs.

Sundquist as John Worthing, head of the manor house; Rose Jorgenson as Cecily Cardew, his ward, and Marilyn Eaton as Lady Brachnell. Miss Eaton, a senior, is a transfer student from Drake university.

According to director Hayes, the production will be a satire on the Victorian stage as well as on the society of the era. To achieve this end, he will use a formal setting, utilizing the "wing stage" of the times.

There will be no doors in the set. Entrances and exits will be made through the wings, which will be formed by a series of flats arranged to achieve forced perspective. A unique feature of these flats is that they will be reversible, one side representing the garden while the other is to be used for the indoor scenes.

after the convocation and will continue until noon Friday.

The annual Homecoming Week square dance will take place the same night at 7:30 in the gymnasium.

The Varsity Show will be held Friday night in the auditorium and will feature local campus talent in skits, songs, dances and other hilarity. Following the Varsity Show, the Freshmen will conduct a bonfire at Chester Bowl.

Starting at approximately 1:00 p.m., Saturday, the Homecoming Parade will wend its way through downtown Duluth. The parade will consist of regional high school bands, floats entered by various campus organizations and marching units.

The football game between UMD and St. Mary's will be contested at Public Schools stadium starting at 8:00 p.m.

Climaxing the hectic week is the Homecoming Dance which will be held at the Armory with dancing starting at 10:30 and continuing until 1:00 a.m.

FRESHMEN FRET AND FROWN OVER NEW CROWN

Frosh Class to Wear Beanies

"Frosh! Where's your Beanie?" This is the cry that will echo through the halls of UMD next week.

Yes, Freshmen, the inevitable has arrived. The Student Council, UMD's student governing body, has decreed that: "Homecoming week, October 22-27, will be FRESHMEN BEANIE WEEK and that all Frosh—both male and female—will be required to wear gold and maroon beanies at all times while on campus and while attending any school event."

The Barkers club, UMD pep organization, will handle the sale of beanies, beginning in main hall either today or Monday. They will be sold at cost.

Frosh, don't feel too sad, or go out and drown your sor-

"Ravage the Redmen;" Button Sales Begin

Eighteen Students Awarded Scholarships

Eighteen UMD students received scholarships from seven organizations according to an announcement released by the Office of Student Personnel Services. The complete list of scholarship donors and winners were not available at press time but they will be published in a later issue.

Nine students received scholarships given by the Alworth Science Scholarship fund. They were Robert Hill, Larson; Harriet Miller, Cotton; Jane McFarland, Carlton; and Robert Korsch, Joseph Young, Sheldon Sorenson, Lawrence Eliason, Wallace Mathews and Charles Taylor, all of Duluth.

Queens Promenade In Convo Thursday

The Homecoming queen convocation will be held Thursday, Oct. 25, at 11 a. m. in the auditorium, according to co-chairman Ron Kramnic and Dick Beckman.

The purpose of this convo is to present the queen candidates to the student body by the campaign managers of the sponsoring organizations. An attractive program has been scheduled, including a few entertaining selections between presentations of the queen candidates.

Following the convocation, the polls will be open for voting and will continue for the remainder of the day.

Dick Wallin will serve as the master of ceremonies.

Navy Commissions Are Subject of Meeting

Lt. Comdr. B. C. Hayes of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement will be on the campus Friday, Oct. 19, to discuss opportunities for commissions for graduating senior men and women.

Seniors who expect to graduate this academic year are invited to attend the meeting which will be held in the auditorium at 9:00 a.m.

Eligibility rules for the Alworth Scholarship include graduation from a Minnesota school, need for financial assistance, marked ability for study in medicine and the natural sciences and demonstrated qualities in character, perseverance and ambition.

Charles Hill, Cromwell, was awarded the Armistead Grady-Kiwanis Scholarship on the basis of his academic aptitude, financial need, and character and vocational promise.

The Tozer Foundation Scholarship, awarded by the Tozer Foundation, Inc., Stillwater, Minnesota, is given on the basis of financial need and vocational promise. Recipients of this scholarship were Donald Deitz, Askov, and William Ehmke, Willow River.

Two students who graduated from International Falls High School were selected by a committee composed of the superintendent, principal and three teachers from that school as winners of the Minnesota Ontario Paper Company scholarship. They were Robert Murray, UMD football captain, and Richard Gay.

Georgia Begovich, Chisholm, and Ralph Anderson, Duluth, were selected for the Duluth Symphony Association Scholarship for their musical ability which qualified them for acceptance as playing members of the Duluth Symphony Orchestra.

The Optimist Club Scholarship is awarded to a male student majoring in physical education who has shown willingness to assist in club programs and is skilled in working with boys' activities. The recipient

Statesman Is Recipient Of National Honors

The Associated Collegiate Press, a critical newspaper service for college newspapers, recently disclosed that the STATESMAN was awarded

First Class Honors for the first half of the school year 1950-51, and won All-American honors for the second half.

Editor of last year's paper was Joy Ganyo and serving as staff members were Robert Leestamper, business manager; Ervin Dorff, news editor; Marilyn Marshall, feature editor; and John Krebs and Arne Moilanen, sports editors.

According to the Associated College Press, "The UMD STATESMAN need take a back seat to no one, including its bigger sister, the Minnesota Daily."

In addition, the critics stated that the centennial edition was "swell."

TODAY'S MORALS ANALYZED

In a well-known national magazine there is an article entitled "How Wild Are College Students?" This particular article is in survey form, the Gilbert Youth Research organization having conducted a student poll in 14 institutions located in ten cities.

According to the article, the conclusions are interesting but not alarming since they tend to tally with the Kinsey report. However, some so-called moralists will use information such as this in writing about the decline of morals in American youth.

In our estimation, these "moralists"—and there are many of them—are approaching the problem from the wrong angle. Instead of getting huffed up and somewhat shocked at the moral behavior of American youth, why don't they concern themselves with the morals of our politicians?

We sincerely feel that if political morals are raised to a higher level, the behavior of youth will also better itself, because we think that whenever confusion and insecurity result from poor leadership, the people can react in only one manner, and that is by being poor followers.

American youth has shed blood on Korean soil and many more are destined to die, while others at home will suffer mental anguish because we are engaged in a war that has had no substantial results to date.

The main concern of political leaders should be the finding of a solution to this frustrating problem; yet many of them are guilty of jockeying for political advantage at the expense of the lives of innocent youth. For example, there are those politicians who denounce the present administration for their blunders by stating that if they had been in office, the present situation would have been avoided.

We believe it is political immorality to think solely in terms of the Democratic party or the Republican party because for each day that is wasted in political wrangling, more American blood will be spilled and more Communist propaganda will be unleashed upon a bewildered citizenry.

Furthermore, it seems to be a commonplace occurrence that some investigating committee uncovers political corruption on the national level, such as "influence" peddling. If this isn't immorality, then we're afraid we don't have the slightest idea of what the word means.

There have been far too many articles written about the moral laxness of youth; instead, the energy expended in unjustly accusing frustrated youth of immoral behavior should be diverted to making the White House aware of its sinful and derogatory practices.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Dear Editor:

I think most people on campus and some people off campus agree that the UMD Bulldogs have done themselves proud on the football field so far this season.

Mind you—done themselves proud without loyal backing or spirited support from the stands! Now that we're on the winning side it's about time the student body united and showed the team that they were with them, winning or losing!

That time has come. Friday the entire team with their coach, Lloyd Peterson, will leave campus at 9:30 a.m. for the all-important St. Thomas game. The Barkers club has started things off right by organizing a send-off committee, complete with cheers, songs and speeches. Students!! This is where you come in!! Rally at the driveway between Main and Washburn and give your team the biggest and loudest send-off they have ever had!! Let your team know that you want them to win, that you're proud of them and that you're with them to the bitter or better end!!

Yours for school spirit,
Dee Campbell.

"YOUR CLUB" SERIES—No. 2

A New Experiment In Politics

By JOHN BRUST

Here in the Land of Sky Blue Waters and pine-scented forests, a pure and fresh bit of air is being injected into politics. In an experiment being conducted on our campus, two political clubs—the Young Democratic-Farmer Labor group and the Young Republican Club—have combined their organizations, and have formed the U.M.D. Democratic-Republican Union.

It all began last spring when both clubs still held separate meetings. At times, when one group had a guest speaker, the other was invited to attend and hear what he had to say. It was soon discovered that the clubs had a mutual goal, and that many supposedly partisan ideas were compatible. Andy Larson, president of the Young Republicans, and Eric Peterson, head of the Democratic-Farmer Laborites, held a conference and decided to hold several joint meetings. Attendance increased and audience participation rose to a higher level. The joint meetings led to a consolidation of the two groups into the new Democratic-Republican Union.

I attended a meeting of this

Students 'Learn to Read' At Campus Study Clinic

Lots of UMD students have doubled their reading rates. Some have even tripled them. That, in substance, was the report recently submitted to Dr. King. And when this reporter heard of it, he headed for the Reading and Study Clinic, two steps at a time (it's on the third floor of Main).

"What is this," he demanded breathlessly (It's on the third floor of main), "about students doubling and tripling their reading rates? Is it true?"

Dr. H. W. Johnson, assistant professor of psychology, who runs the clinic, sat wearily—and it seemed to us gratefully—on the desk he had just moved for the eighth time, trying to arrange his new office just right. "Of course it's true. A few almost quadrupled their rates. Then, of course, some increased them only 30 per cent. It depended, of course, on a lot of things, mostly how much they worked at it."

"I wanted to ask you about that," we told him. Very gingerly, we sat on a small table, next to a strange-looking machine. Then we noticed that it wasn't plugged in and settled down more comfortably. "How much did they have to work at it?"

"Those who did what they were supposed to worked about ten hours—or ten weeks, depending on how you looked at it. They spent four fifteen-minute practice sessions per week for one quarter."

"Who were these people—psychology students?"

"Most of them were, in a way. Most of them were in that 'How to Study' course."

"What do you mean, 'in a way'?"

"Well, the course is offered by the Psychology Department but the students don't study any psychology in it, exactly. So they don't get any credit for a psychology major or minor."

"Then what's the credit good for, anyhow?" We were, of course, not making diplomatic history. "And how can you grade people in a course like that?"

"The credit counts toward their 180 or 192 credits needed for graduation, chum. And the grades depend upon how much time they put in improving their reading and study skills. For instance, if they do the practicing I mentioned, come to class Monday and Wednesday, and use the recommended study methods on their other courses six hours a week, that adds up to about 'A' work. Need I point out that two hours of 'A' is six honor points?"

"No, chum, you needn't. I'm a genius, too. To me, two times three is duck soup. One more question. You say 'most' of the people who boomed up their reading rates were students in that class. How did the others get in on it?"

"Oh, a lot of people come in here who aren't in that class. Some come in to learn specific study techniques, and so forth. Those just happened to be taking training to speed up their reading."

"I should do that myself. My work would be a lot easier if I could read real fast."

"A good idea, but not original, I'm afraid. Mrs. Nicholas and Miss Roberts, who do this work down on the Minneapolis campus, say they've had students, instructors, deans—I think they said one of the vice presidents come in for reading training. And a group of Minneapolis business men arranged for a course of training so that they could clear their desks off faster. They liked it so much they bought the clinic some new equipment when the course was over."

"Oh, really? Look, friend—don't think I'm not fascinated by your conversation, because I'm not, but I've got work to do. Thanks for the information, and I'm on my way."

"Good. Before you go, do me a favor. Help me just move this desk back over against the wall, will you?"

their political identity.

"We want to air the problems before us intellectually, not emotionally," he observed, "although of course we get into some pretty hot arguments. We definitely believe in the two-party system; this is not a move to unite the two parties."

"We want to look at the nation's problems objectively, without an overlay of prejudice and predisposition." This last idea seems to sum up the purpose of the Democratic-Republican Union. In view of the muddled state of affairs in government today, when the theme should be clear thinking and co-operation, this new group may have hit upon a possible answer.

Eric, concurring with Andy's statement, added, "What we need at this time is intelligent, bi-partisan action on foreign policy and other important issues. You have to start at the very bottom to establish bi-partisanship on an effective basis."

The new organization has already attracted national attention. Helen H. Nasburg, writing in the Christian Science Monitor, comments upon the new Union thus: "Can it be that these serious and earnest young people are going to show us the way back? The development of the new U.M.D. Democratic-Republican Union may contribute much to our national security by suggesting an effective way to take it out of partisan politics, where it most certainly does not belong."

Perhaps this group can set the pattern for others. Certainly there must be young people in other colleges in Minnesota and throughout the country who are concerned and interested in the activities within our government. Here at UMD we see an effective example of political co-operation and the results are impressive.

Riding downtown with Mel after the meeting, he remarked, "I think it is a great idea, and we are certainly going to encourage all students to join with us in finding an answer to what ails our country today."

The next meeting of the Democratic-Republican Union will be Oct. 24th, and I take Mel's remarks to be an invitation to all, that they and their ideas are desired in this new venture in politics.

Attention All Squares: Dance Set for Thursday

Chairman Virginia Christie announces that the annual Homecoming Square Dance will take place on Thursday, Oct. 25, at 7:30 in the UMD gymnasium.

The PEMM'S, an organization consisting of students majoring and minoring in physical education, are in charge of the decorations.

Noted Pediatrician Speaks at Med Frat

Dr. Barrette, a prominent pediatrician, spoke to the Pre Meds, Dents, Pharms, and Vets., on "A Future in Medicine." He was the keynote speaker at an initiation dinner given for 12 new pledges coming into the Pre Medicinal fraternity.

The dinner was preceded by an informal meeting at Tweed Hall on Monday night, Oct. 8, to which prospective men were invited. This was followed by an informal initiation during school on Wednesday at which time all the UMD students were wondering who those men were behind those funny little white masks.

Sigma Alpha Iota to Entertain at Tweed

Sigma Alpha Iota, the music fraternity on the campus, will entertain all women music majors and minors at a punch party at Tweed Hall this afternoon from 2:30 p. m. until 4:30 p. m. Patronesses of the fraternity will be present to meet new students.

A dinner will be given by Miss Thelma Johnson and Mrs. Malmber in honor of the pledgees, Beverly Apter, Delores Hietala, Barbara Gilbertson and Pat Rood tomorrow evening.

Oh, for the life of a newspaperman . . . we sweat and slave, and the paper finally goes to press . . . ahhh, I can settle back, put my feet on my desk and lazily gaze at our feminine assistants, as they scurry about to tidy up the place. But here comes that mean old editor again, with another assignment and another issue must be put out.

Yes, here it is again, another week has passed, and I am still without a penny to go with this nickel. (Just a hint to ED. for a raise.) Guess we will have to put it in the machine for a bottle of "America's National Drink." Believe it or not, I saw one of those big, red, one-armed bandits in Hibbing the other day, which had a slot designed for dimes.

It is getting so these five-cent pieces won't buy anything any more . . . save, maybe, a pad of butter, a couple crackers, or a glass of water (refills extra).

Did you know that our government has an Office of Price Stabilization? I heard about it the other day, when Dr. Davidson made a long-distance call to Washington to get a job for one of the graduating Political Science majors.

"What can he do?" asked Mr. DiSalle.

Dr. Davidson: "Well, sir, to be frank about it, nothing."

Mr. DiSalle: "That's fine. We won't have to break him in."

Calling All Coeds

By LOIS CONRAD

Girls, let's see that UMD really "wakes up" for homecoming next week.

We've got a good school, scholastically; the state is providing funds with which to build a new campus, and the football team has now won three straight games, putting them at the top of the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

Our school spirit is on the way up, but let's boost it up on par with our football team.

Here's how it can be done. There are five main homecoming events—the varsity show, the bonfire, the parade, the game, and the homecoming dance. If each of the 500 girls on the campus will attend all of the events, they should attract quite a number of males, as well as boost the school spirit. Or else there's something wrong with UMD's 500 women.

With some 50 organizations, we ought to make this year's parade one of the most colorful ever.

You don't have a truck? There isn't a business firm in Duluth that wouldn't loan a truck for that purpose. And decorations? Many stores have any number of props and advertising material which they would gladly loan. Inflation hasn't hit the decorative paper business hard enough yet to bother even the lowest of club treasurers.

All that's left is the hard work. Few coeds are trying to gain weight, so the bending, twisting, pulling and stretching to make a float should be welcomed. The fun involved and the feeling of accomplishment are the rewards for the time spent.

The football team, faculty, and regents have done their part to boost UMD. It's the student body's turn now.

of this scholarship was Bruce Paulson of Moose Lake.

Ruth Walker, Cloquet, was awarded a scholarship granted by the American Association of University Women in Cloquet. The student selected for this scholarship must be a graduate of Cloquet High School. Selection by the Scholarship Committee is made on the basis of scholarship, personality and financial need.

Other groups which award UMD students with scholarships are the following:

Civil Service Regents, Duluth Business and Professional Women's Club, Duluth Matinee Musicale, Elk's National Foundation, Josephine L. Merriam Scholarship fund, Minnesota Alumni, Scottish Rite, Soroptimist Club of Duluth, Tollef Thompson Scholarship and the J. W. Hunt Scholarship.

Names of recipients of these scholarships along with eligibility rules will be released later.

RANGERS HOLD OPENING MEETING

President Bill Casey presided at the first meeting of the Rangers club, an organization composed of students from the Vermillion, Mesabi and Cuyuna ranges, Tuesday night in Washburn Hall. Other officers, all of whom were elected last spring, are John Luhta, vice-president; Alice Arola, secretary; Dale Holter, treasurer; Mike Doyle, Student council; Kark Fleck, social chairman; and Frank Jerrick, publicity chairman.

Discussion was centered on construction of a float for the Homecoming. A committee was named with Jerry Sorosky chosen as chairman.

The next meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m., Oct. 30, at Washburn. All students from the Range are urged to attend.

Gamma Theta Phi Installs Officers

The Gamma Theta Phi social fraternity held its first formal meeting of the school year with a dinner at the Skyline Club. Paul Johnson passed the gavel on to Jim Dow, the succeeding president for the year. Other officers for the year are: vice president, Tom Sermon; secretary, Dick Beckman; historian, Lloyd Marchand; sergeant-at-arms, Bill Jensen and Student Council representative, John Sherman. Plans were laid for the following year which includes both a Christmas and Commencement Dance. The next meeting will be held this Friday at 7:00 p. m., in Washburn.

Surprising UMD Gridders Face Tommies In Title Quest

By BUDDY LAMPPA

The UMD Bulldogs will be seeking their fourth MIAC victory, when they tangle with a powerful St. Thomas eleven on the latter's field tonight.

The Tommies can be expected to be even a tougher match for the Bulldogs, this being the former's homecoming game.

The Branchmen showed themselves to be one of the major powers in the conference as they walloped a previously undefeated Hamline team by a score of 21-6 last Friday.

Sustaining no serious injury in the Piper game, the Bulldogs can be expected to be in almost top condition for Friday's tussle.

The Tommies, hit heavily by graduation, losing 10 regulars, will not be the same group of smooth running veterans that lost only to the Gusties, last season. Only two of last year's starters are back. They are Norb Tokarz and Glenn Thommes, alternating signal callers.

They both have been shifted to the halfback positions to make way for a pair of sophomore quarterbacks, Jim McQuillan and Len Haryza. St. Thomas, however, has a big squad of 55 gridders, 11 of these being lettermen.

In comparison, Duluth has 12 lettermen back, including one of the hardest hitting lines in the conference. With Ken Johnson, Bernie Neary and Jerry Novak in top condition, Coach Lloyd Peterson's boys can be expected to play good football.

Both UMD and St. Thomas are undefeated in conference play. This contest could be the deciding factor as to who will rule the MIAC at the season's end.

Branchmen Upset Pipers, 21-6, for Third MIAC Win

The Bulldogs, after trailing by a 6-0 deficit in the first quarter, came back strong to down favored Hamline, 21-6. It was the third straight victory in conference play for the Branchmen and puts them in a three-way tie for first place with Gustavus and St. Thomas.

The Pipers got off to a fast start in the first period and took a 6-0 lead before the Bulldog defense became accustomed to their style of attack.

The second quarter saw the lead change, however, when fullback Ken Johnson burst through the center of the line and scampered 44 yards, behind good blocking, to a touchdown. Jerry Novak placekicked the first of his three extra-points to bring the score to 7-6.

After holding the Pipers on four downs inside the ten-yard line, the Bulldogs started a drive that ended with halfback Bernie Neary going into the end zone from the two-yard line.

The third UMD touchdown came on a 64-yard march with halfback Novak legging it over the double stripes on a ten-yard sprint around the end.

UMD 21, HAMLINE 6

This oft-repeated phrase has become a cherished by-word around ol' Main and Washburn, and rightly so, for the upset win by Coach Lloyd Peterson and his sizzling Bulldogs definitely proved to the Twin Cities and southern entrants in the MIAC that the Branch is anything but a northwoods "cousin."

With the victory, the Bulldogs have climbed into a first-place deadlock with St. Thomas and Gustavus Adolphus — the trio all claiming 3-0 conference records. Prior to the Hamline encounter, it would have been a rare, almost disgraceful occurrence to mention St. Thomas, Gustavus and UMD in the same humble breath, but now — Peterson's charges are dark-horses to capture the league title.

Now that the Bulldogs have played exactly half of their conference schedule and have come through minus defeat, its about time you give them your loyal backing.

The team's spirit is way up — now it's up to YOU to boost the student spirit way up. Let's do it — we've got the team! ! ! ! AND WE PLAY 'EM

Tom Zweiner, quarterback of Gustavus, is the nation's leader among small colleges in total offense and in forward passing. Zweiner's aeriels have accounted for a net gain of 642 yards while his total offensive gain is 695 yards. Up to the recent Macalester game, which the Gusties won, 34-0, Zweiner had completed 41 of 92 pass attempts.

Gustavus' captain, Haldo Norman, is the small college's number one pass-catcher with 20 receptions.

UMD will play the Gusties in their last game of the season, Nov. 3, at St. Peter.

QUICK PROMOTION

We have erroneously been reporting Kenny Johnson as being a sophomore. Much to our sorrow and the disappointment of the coaching staff, affable Kenneth, a letterman in basketball, football and track, is a junior.
